

ABSTRACT

In a flywheel having variable inertia, first and second guide grooves are respectively formed at a body and a rotatable member such that an overlapping position thereof is varied according to a relative rotation thereof. A movable mass is disposed at the overlapping position, and the rotatable member rotates relatively to the body by hydraulic pressure.